DEATH PENALTY ASKED FOR EX- LEE CENTERITE

Trial of Perry Depew for Murder of Woman is Begun

BULLETIN

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 21.—Perry DePew, former Lee Center man, was indicted guilty to the murder of his former sweetheart, Mrs. Pearl Hixon of Kewanee, when arraigned on the charge in the circuit court at Cambridge this afternoon.

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Perry Depew, former Lee Center man, was scheduled to go on trial in the Henry county circuit court at Cambridge, Illinois, today, for the murder of Mrs. Pearl Buckley Hixon, his former sweetheart, who was shot to death in Kewanee, June 20. The defense is expected to be based on an insanity plea, and Attorney M. L. Hay, Kewanee, has been retained for Depew. Judge N. A. Larson of Moline, who heard the recent conspiracy trial of John P. Looney in Rock Island, will preside at Depew's hearing. The death penalty will be asked, State's Attorney Carl A. Mellin of Cambridge has announced.

The last hanging in Henry county occurred March 22, 1883, when Sylvester Mackinson died on the gallows.

Mrs. Hixon was 33 years old. Depew is 30. The shooting occurred across the street from the Kewanee jail and hundreds of shoppers heard the report of the shot which caused the woman's death.

Woman Shopper Shot

Depew was captured after a gun battle with the police, during which Mrs. William Streicher was shot in the leg.

Police, sitting in headquarters awaiting a call, were suddenly aroused by the rapid barking of a revolver directly across the street in front of the Tremont cafe at $45. Officer Frank Schindelwitz, revolver in hand, ran from the station, closely followed by Officer Richards. Depew saw them coming and opened fire on them. The officers returned the shots and Depew dropped to the pavement as it he had been shot. Examination, however, revealed that the shot only grazed his leg.

Other officers had responded to the call of the revolver shots and soon the street in front of the cafe was wrecked, but the hunt for gold continued. So far about $3,000 in the $70,000 believed secreted on the place have been found.

The money was hidden in every conceivable place.

Money Behind Mantle.

When the great eight-foot walnut mantelpiece was removed from the wall, gold worth $1300 tumbled out.

The native stone hearth was torn up and beneath it was found a can of gold. An old gourd in the kitchen when emptied of string netted $5.

Coins worth $129, were found in the cellar.

A sack of old ginned cotton was worked over by hand and gave up many gold pieces.

Excitemenent prevailed when some one found an old pocketbook containing $7,000 in bills—but this proved to be worthless Confederate money.

Gold in Death Bed.

More gold was found in the crevices of an old four-poster bed on which "Aunt Ann" died.

In an old pouch two ancient gold bracelets beautifully carved and undoubtedly the height of fashion in Colonial days, were found.

The search for gold is being made under the direction of a court with the provision that all of "Aunt Ann's" relatives must share equally in whatever wealth is found.

Immediately after her father's death in 1895, "Aunt Ann," then 51, refused to let any of her relatives come on the farm.

At the time, it is alleged, that Depew killed her because she had rejected him. The letter follows:

Letter Held As Evidence

"Friday evening—After a day of mental and bodily torture, I am wondering if you are satisfied.

"I am wondering just how you feel about all of it today and how you regard your actions of last night. Perhaps you will be surprised and perhaps you will not, but I am willing to throw up my hands and say quit, after studying everything over today. Last night was the last straw and just simply killed everything I ever felt for you. We better know these things now, before it is too late, for we both have had enough troubles. You do not need to blame my folks or anyone for this, but just yourself. Perhaps I was in the wrong part of the time, but it just seems we didn't fit together."

"Don't try to see me for it won't do any good. I trust you will forgive me, as though I never had been and may the Lord forgive us both is my prayer."

Witnesses on the street said that no word was spoken between Depew and Mrs. Hixon preceding the shooting. Police investigation indicates that Mrs. Hixon and Depew had been keeping company for some time, that she was commencing to resent his attentions and finally refused to see him at all.

Meet In Hospital

According to Dr. C. P. White, they first met at the St. Francis hospital, where Mrs. Hixon was acting as a nurse. She attended Depew three weeks. Dr. White said Depew had been acting queerly of late and he had told him, "I can not control myself any more."

The revolver with which the murderer was committed was a .32-caliber automatic. On one side of the wooden butt is engraved the words, "In God We Trust" and on the reverse side, "My Honest Pal." All the cartridges in it had been fired.

Mrs. Hixon left two children, Rose-

PRESIDENT NEAR INJURY ON BUSY CAPITAL STREET

Baltimore Man Nearly Ran Him Down With His Automobile

Washington, Sept. 21—(AP)—Only the quick action of a secret service attendant is believed to have saved President Coolidge from being run down by an automobile, while he was walking near the White House last night.

The motorist, who gave his name as Nathan D. Smith, 56, of Baltimore, was arrested on a charge of violating traffic regulations after another of the President's attendants had leaped to the running board of the car as it swept by.

The President, the police were informed, had just stepped from the curb to cross the street at an intersection when Smith, in turning the corner, is alleged to have cut in sharply toward the curb. With the car sweeping in directly toward him, one of the secret service men who saw it quickly grabbed the President's arm and drew him back to the curb, the car narrowly missing him.

The attendant who jumped on the running board of the car, turned Smith over to a traffic officer for arrest after they had gone about a block further on. Smith was charged with cutting corners and failing to give the right of way to pedestrians. He was released on $3,500 bond for his appearance in traffic court.

Aged Man Victim of Auto Mishap Saturday

By Telegraph Special Service

Franklin Grove, Sept. 21.—The funeral of the late Nathan A. Whitney was held here this afternoon at 2:30 with burial in the Franklin Grove cemetery. The final rites were in charge of Franklin Grove Lodge, No. 269, A. F. & A. M. of which the deceased was one of the oldest members. Mr. Whitney had served as secretary of the Blue Lodge for 24 years and was master of the lodge in 1889. He was also a member of the local chapter which bears the name of his grandfather and served as secretary of that branch of 26 years. He passed away Saturday evening in Chicago where he had gone for treatment for an illness with which he had been suffering for the past eight months. Mr. Whitney was a rural mail carrier out of the Franklin Grove post office and was retired Dec. 6, 1924. The complete obituary will be published later.

NEW COMER—

By Hal Cochran.

Said one little boy to a neighbor hood lad, "Say, I got a reason to really be glad. The doctor came callin', and gee, he was kind. He left me a wee baby brother behind."

"I don't know his name, 'cause he can't talk as yet, and, so far, my father has just called him pet. He looks kinda funny and hasn't much hair, but, shucks, he's my brother, so whaddya care?"

"It seems kinda mean 'cause they don't feed him much. I'd slip him some jam but 'twould get me in dutch. He's wearin' long dresses like girls wear. Aw, gee, I kick like the deuce if they put 'em on me."

"But never-the-less, he's my brother, and say, he's gonna come in mighty handy some day. They tell me he'll grow till he's big as can be. Jus' think of the things he can do, 'stead of me."

"I'll let him burn papers and clean up the yard. Here lately I've really been workin' too hard. He'll do all my errands. Aw, I ain't so dumb. No wonder I'm glad that my brother has come."

PARISIAN SOCIETY AND ITS FAVORITES

Stage Beauty Favors All — White Toette.

White mousseline de sole, embroidered with pearls and strass, has been chosen by Gabrielle Dorzat for one of the plays in which she is to appear shortly. With this gown, which has been specially designed by Philippe et Gaston, she will wear white kid shoes which have straps ornamented with pearls and heels studded with artificial diamonds.

In private life, Mlle Dorzat is the Comtesse de Zoghbi, and she is credited with being one of the best dressed women in Paris.

"Best Dressed" Woman's Smart Shoes.

Mrs. Nash, who in the Divorce Court has claimed to be "the best dressed woman in the world," is still doing her best to retain her title. She is now spending fabulous sums on sumptuous footwear.

At the Deauville Casino she made every other woman envious of her pale blue kid shoes with diamond ornamented straps and heels studded with real turquoise — G. F. Lees, special correspondent "Shoe and Leather Reporter."

manse. The single ring ceremony was utilized. Succeeding the service, the bride, attired in a gown of blue velvet brocaded georgette, and her husband, departed for the east to spend two weeks in sightseeing.

The bride resided with her aunt from childhood. She was a successful teacher in the rural schools after her graduation.

Her character is immaculate. Her disposition is kindly, considerate and amiable—in fact, in every way she is an ideal bride, whose presence in a home will radiate happiness.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weishaar, Sr., of Ashton. He is one whose friends vouch for him as a good fellow, honest and thrifty.

After October 1st, Mr. and Mrs. Weishaar will be at home to their friends in Ashton. They will reside temporarily with the groom's parents, and later on a farm.

May the future bring to their hearth, blessings of peace, prosperity and joy, is our wish sincere.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

BREAKFAST— Chilled melon, cereal, thin cream, scrambled eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON— Vegetable soup with meat stock, cottage cheese salad, rye bread and butter sandwiches, apple sauce, molasses cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER— Casserole of macaroni and beef, beans in cream, cabbage with sour cream dressing, whole wheat bread, peach pie, milk, coffee.

PEACH CREAM PIE. Five or six peaches,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup sugar, 2 cups scalped milk,  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons flour, 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons powdered sugar, unbaked pie shell.

Pare peaches and slice into pie dish lined with plain pastry. Sprinkle with  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup sugar. Mix flour, salt and remaining sugar and stir into yolks of eggs. Slowly add hot milk, stirring constantly. Stir until sugar is perfectly dissolved. Pour over peaches. Bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry with powdered sugar. Spread over pie and return to the oven for eight minutes to puff and brown the meringue.

PAPER WAS A CREDIT TO WOMEN'S CLUB— The Tri-County Press of Polo was edited in its last issue entirely by women, the women of the Polo Woman's Club, who deserve much praise for the issue was a splendid effort. The news was gathered, edited and proof read entirely by the members of the club, and it seemed to some of us that it really had more short newsy local items than the usual number. More power to the women—they have a practical conception of ideals and work in the world today.

MADE A MISTAKE SATURDAY, BEG PARDON, TODAY—

In Saturday's issue of the Telegraph we inadvertently said "American Legion Auxiliary," when we meant "War Mothers" in the write up about the American War Mothers in pleading for the help of all good Americans in the aid for the orphan children of the World War Veterans. We beg pardon.

FASHION HINTS—

Long Sleeves. One sees either sleeves that are long and tight or else no sleeves at all.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Metal fabrics are featured for evening wear, some are finely pleated, others are embroidered and jeweled.

VELVET VERY FASHIONABLE.

A feature of the fall styles is the lavish manner in which velvet is employed for trimming on cloth, silk and chiffon frocks.

FIGURED MATERIALS LEAD.

Figured materials and fancy weaves have preference over plain in the wools and silks shown for winter. Velvets too are printed and striped.

DOUBLE NECKLACES.

The double strand of medium sized pearls is more popular in Paris than the single or triple strands that are more prevalent.

RICHER SHADES FEATURED.

While there are many gray and tan hats shown, the smartest women seem to have a fancy for the richer shades of green rose or purple. These are particularly effective in velour.

INFLUENCE OF THE ENSEMBLE.

It is considered very chic to have one's bracelet, finger rings and hat pin ornaments of the same jewels or combinations of jewels. The ensemble idea is being carried further in accessories than ever before.

THURSDAY READING CIRCLE—

The Thursday Reading Circle will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Richard Cortright, 805 Peoria avenue, in the first meeting of the year. The program will include items of current events and a reading from Shakespeare.

Willard W. C. T. U. Meeting Friday

The Willard Women's Christian Temperance Union held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Merion Maben Friday afternoon with a good attendance. Mrs. Herman Missman, president, presided. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Fister. She read John XIV. Mrs. Thompson followed with prayer. A selection was given on the Victrola, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." The president appointed her committees and superintendents. They are as follows: Christian Citizenship, Mrs. Emma Geiser; Flower Mission, Mrs. Rhoda Fister; Parliamentary, Mrs. Lillian Harned; Publicity, Mrs. Merion Maben; Sabbath Observance, Mrs. Hettie Dawson; Scientific Temperance, Mrs. O. E. Strock; Soldiers and Sailors, Mrs. George Carpenter; Temperance and Missions, Mrs. D. C. Leake; Literature, Mrs. Belle Morris; Mothers Meetings, Mrs. J. Lievan.

Olga Petrova, actress, is back in New York after a trip abroad. She brought with her a pet monkey, little dreaming that any photographers would want to take its picture.

Until they are 21 they must obey their father's orders about bedtime.

"You may stay out until eleven on nights when you go to the theater, and until twelve on nights when you dance," said the judge. "But you can neither dance nor go to the movies unless your father says you can—until you're of age."

Judge Boote's decision may be of help to thousands of fathers in this country . . . and to mothers, too.

For there is no doubt that the modern flapper with her I'll-do-as-I please attitude is a puzzle and a problem to the average parent.

"Mother, may I go out to swim?" asked the sweetly obedient young thing of yesterday, pulling on her bathing stockings, and smoothing down the modest skirt of her suit over her hidden knees.

"So long! I'm going for a swim in the tank!" calls the slangy Flapper, dashing out of the house without so much as a by-your-leave.

The Dutiful Daughter we used to hear so much about has become the World Problem of today. At sixteen she goes when and where she pleases, picks out her own clothes, sets the fashion to suit her own taste for short skirts and sports bats, rolls her cigarette, and worries her parents extremely.

"I don't know what the children are coming to!" wails one mother that I know. "They don't start out to their parties until ten o'clock at night. When I was young, a girl always said goodnight to her callers at that time and went to bed for a good night's sleep. But my children are never home before one in the morning."

For such dispairing parents, the decision of Judge Boote will come like light in darkness . . . to point their course for them.

All they have to do, really, is to remind Daughter that until she is 21 she is a child in the eyes of the law and must obey her parents.

And if her parents say: "Sally, be home from that party by eleven thirty tonight," she must be home by eleven thirty according to the law of the land!

A very good law it is too, for a young woman and man to be obliged to obey their elders. For while self-reliance in the young is a good thing, it is utterly useless unless there is experience to back it up.

"I don't see what's wrong," is a pat phrase that is forever on the lips of the young, when they are told not to do this, that or the other thing.

And just because they can't see why certain things are sure to bring disaster and ruin in their wake is the best reason in the world for such organization as the Father's Association in Yonkers, New York.

The notion that "youth is entitled to its own mistakes" is a ruinous one. Youth is no more entitled to its own mistakes than a baby is entitled to play alone on the edge of a precipice.

I wish that there were as many Father's Associations in the land as there are Mother's clubs . . . groups that would help our wayward adolescents to stick to the straight and narrow path until they are old enough to find their way alone.

CUMMINS ON TAXATION.

Senator Cummins has declared himself in favor of abandoning the field of inheritance taxation by the federal government, leaving it to the state. He makes the single exception that tax-exempt securities, which have escaped income taxes by reason of their form, may be taxed by the government.

This declaration is of particular interest because it varies from the plan of Congressman W. R. Green of Iowa, the state of Cummins, and Green is chairman of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives, which originates all revenue legislation.

It is the belief of Congressman Green that if the field of taxing inheritances is left wholly to the states, there will be a rush of men of great wealth to the two or three states which do not tax inheritances, there to establish their residences and die.

Holding that view, Mr. Green has evolved the plan that the federal tax shall be collected as usual, but to those states that imposed taxes themselves. The states that do not tax inheritances shall receive no part of the federal tax.

Senator Cummins dealt with that reasoning in an address before the Iowa Town clubs. He said:

"It has been asserted with apparent confidence that if the federal death tax were repealed, that great estates would escape a state tax by a removal of the residence of the owners to those states which either have no tax at all or a very inadequate tax. As I view the subject, this argument will not bear analyzing. In the first place it assumes that the states will pursue a course contrary to the best interests of the people and this disparagement of state governments can not be accepted. Second, it ignores the fact that but few men of great wealth can, without serious disturbance of their affairs, change their residence from one state to another. Third, the contention is based upon a false conception of the power and jurisdiction of the several states.

"A rich man might, if his estate were all in money, take up his residence in a state that levied no tax upon succession, and so escape, but the men of our country who die rich do not ordinarily leave behind them money estates. Their wealth is represented in corporate stocks or bonds, in mortgages, land, stores, factories and productive enterprises of all kinds. These and similar properties can not be moved from one state to another by the mere act of changing a place of residence, and they can not escape the estate or inheritance taxes of the state in which the corporations are organized, which have issued the stock, where the mortgaged land is situated, where the real property is located or where the industrial or mercantile activity is carried on. The objection is purely imaginary and has no merit. I agree that it would be an ideal arrangement if the federal government had the exclusive power to levy death or inheritance taxes and to distribute among the states the entire sum so derived, but, it has no such exclusive power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the farmers of the state of Iowa, whose commodities barely sustain the cost of production, and who are anxiously seeking relief from the overwhelming burdens of direct taxation, or if it were submitted to the owners of real property in a city like Des Moines, who are paying an enormous rate upon the assessed value of their lots, I am sure the answer would be that the state of Iowa should have all of the revenue that can be raised by the levy of a reasonable tax upon estates and inheritances."

President Coolidge initiated the movement for the repeal of inheritance tax laws of the federal government. He has not publicly discussed the proposal of Chairman Green of the committee on ways and means.

VACATION.

On one hand all of the vacation thrill is over. That concerns the kids. School starts.

On the other hand the vacation thrill starts. This concerns mother.

Few youngsters realize just how much mother gives up, how much work she does, what effort she goes to, to see that the kids have a real rest from school studies.

When the little old school bell starts to ring again, teachers will be taking the youngsters off mother's hands for a few hours a day.

And Mom will get the much needed rest.

SYMPATHY.

A youngster violates the rules and regulations of the household, is caught at it, threatened with a spanking, says "I'm sorry"—and likely escapes punishment.

We all kind of sympathize with the tot.

A grown-up man does a parallel thing. Violates rules and regulations. He gets his dues, flies off the handle—and then comes down to earth and apologizes.

Some people never grow up.

Maybe that's why the general public sort of sympathizes with Babe Ruth.

Kansas City and Omaha have a bricklayer each who claims to be the fastest in the world. That sounds like old times. Bricklayers used to take pride in the amount of work they could do in a day. That went out of style during the cost-plus period. One almost was made to wonder if the contest among individuals was not developing into one of which could get by with the least.

A THOUGHT

He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.—Psalms 103:19.

Few love to hear the sins they love to act.—Shakespeare.

The writer has just had the interesting experience of participating in a public debate with Senator Borah, in Borah's own state, on his pet subject of the world court.

If you have ever boxed Dempsey, you know what that is like.

However, "thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just."

And those of us who happen to agree on this subject with Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge; with all the platforms of all the parties in this century; with nine-tenths of Congress; with capital and labor, the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Federation of Labor, with the organized expression of religious and educational bodies, women's clubs and farm organizations, and with the action of nearly all the governments in the world, are under any sense of humbleness even if a small handful of United States senators, including one or two of the ablest, choose to take the other side.

If we are mistaken, so are most of the human race.

Senator Borah himself is "for" a world court.

All he wants is that it meet conditions which he agrees are impossible and some of which are impossible because he and his associates will not let them be fulfilled.

He wants a world code of laws, which could only be enacted by precisely the sort of world legislature whose chief opponent he could be, and an outlawing of war which can only be enforced by precisely the sort of sanctions to which he would never consent.

He wants a Leagueless world court in a world most of which is joined in the League.

Whenever these and several other conditions are fulfilled—and he is in the place of power, to see to it that they never are—then, unless he can meantime devise some other objections, the doughty senator may consent to our going into the court which we founded and which the rest of the world has accepted from us.

In other words: Never!

Vice President Dawes has a conclusive answer to the claim that "no good bill was ever killed by filibuster than did not eventually pass."

Even this is not entirely true, and would not justify minority rule, if it were.

But the vice president does not stop at the good bills that may have been killed by filibuster, and never passed. He emphasizes mostly the bad bills that were passed by filibuster and never repealed.

For one of the commonest purposes of filibuster is not to defeat the bill filibustered against, but to use it as a club to compel the acceptance of some pet local measure or amendment which could never pass on its merits.

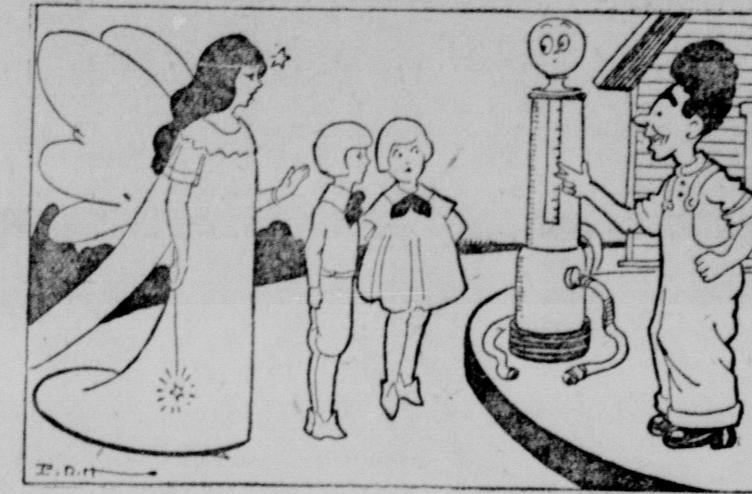

This happens many times, every session, and there are probably few senators who have not indulged in it. It is one of the greatest evils of the present system.

It is to be feared, however, that the president mistakes his psychology at one point, in appealing to the people against the localism of their representatives.

The people of Oregon are doubtless very indignant at the incident Mr. Dawes told them, of the South Carolina senator who threatened to hold up a vital appropriation bill and make an extra session necessary, un-

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Olive Roberts Barton

THE NEW GASOLINE STATION

"The filling station is all finished, Your Majesty," he said to the Fairy Queen.

"Well, it has happened at last!" said the Fairy Queen.

"What has happened?" asked the Twins in surprise.

"You might guess," sighed her Royal Highness. "All the meadow people and wood folk, and even the barnyard inhabitants, have the automobile craze."

Nancy laughed merrily. "I shouldn't worry about it," she said. "People can only get into one kind of trouble at a time. Mother says when they are doing that they are not into any other kind of mischief."

"That is true," smiled the little lady. "And let us hope that there will be peace at least from now on. But there! That isn't what I came to see about. Will you Twins start a gasoline station for me?"

I suppose it is necessary even for ticks to keep up with the times, and I've had about two dozen letters and telephone calls this week asking me to please fix a place for people to get gasoline for their cars."

"Certainly," said Nick, politely. "We'll do just the best we can."

"That's fine," said the Fairy Queen in a relieved voice. "Come with me then. I'll show you where it is to be. I think the best place is half way up the valley, where the road runs between the creek and the pond."

Then she gave each of them the wonderful magic shoes in which they had so many other adventures.

The instant the Twins put them on the world seemed to change. Hidden things became very plain, such as tiny roads and paths running cross-here and there over the country side that you can only just guess are there when you look with ordinary eyes.

It sprang into view as (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service, Inc.)

less a certain appropriation for South Carolina was passed.

But the people of South Carolina are not. And the senator from South Carolina does not care what the people of Oregon think of him.

The only indignation a senator fears is the indignation of his own constituents.

Who ever heard of that indignation being aroused by his using trading and log-rolling to get local favors and appropriations for them?

That is exactly the most popular thing he can do, in the only place where he cares for popularity.

ly; and when the men put their hands down in the vase, they failed to find these pockets.

The vase was an extremely fine specimen of the famous black porcelain of the Ming dynasty, and exceedingly valuable; but even at the cost of its destruction, Mr. Prescott is very glad to have solved the mystery of the pearls.

The friends of Mrs. Prescott, however, are always sure that there is something to be told that will be sensational in regard to the most splendid collection of pearls in Pittsburgh.

With rare presence of mind Miss Ellington hurriedly removed the pearls from the safe, where she knew the burglars immediately look, and dropped them in

It was then that the thieves made their appearance, and were probably torturing her to make her give up the combination of the safe when Sydney Carlton heard the noise and came downstairs.

Who Makes the Price of Gasoline?

The public is slow to condemn—it is quick to condemn—but when it has the facts it is fair.

It has become a habit for many people to blame the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) when in their judgment the price of gasoline is too high.

To analyze this condition is to conclude that it is only the penalty we pay for being big, but as our size reflects only the scope of the service we render, we must accept such degree of responsibility as may be properly charged to our account.

What is said to be the largest policy ever written by a Los Angeles company, on the life of a Los Angeles resident, has just been announced, to Richard Thomas, president of Richard Thomas productions. It is for $1,000,000, and was written by the Great Republic Life Insurance Company; the producing company is the beneficiary. Thomas announces that he will soon begin operations here on a program calling for eight pictures a year, each to cost $100,000. He is known in the industry as the producer of twenty-seven pictures. Estelle Taylor (now Mrs. Jack Dempsey), Kathryn McGuire, Rod LaRocque and Carmel Myers have starred in his past productions.

At the Famous Players-Lasky studio, Mr. Dawes was greeted by the General Manager.

At the Pickford-Fairbanks studio, Doug, garbed in the costume of a pirate, was the first to greet Mr. Dawes. The vice president was escorted to the set where he met Miss Pickford, costumed as Little Annie Rooney. Miss Pickford went through one of the scenes of her new picture, which was followed by a luncheon on the lot in Miss Pickford's private bungalow.

At least 5000 feet of film were taken at the three studios of Mr. Dawes and his party.

An Anniversary

Wednesday, Sept. 9, was the 75th anniversary of the admission of California into the Union. For a week, from Sept. 5 to 12, the Diamond Jubilee of the Golden State was fittingly celebrated by the whole commonwealth, the celebration being centered in the historic and pioneer city of San Francisco.

California's leap to fame, started from the American river, when James Wilson Marshall at Coloma, while building a saw mill, accidentally discovered the first gold nugget.

Rarely is the privilege given to a city to witness as elaborate an entertainment as that promised at the benefit for the Santa Barbara Mission next Thursday night at the Olympic Auditorium. Stars pre-eminent in opera, the drama and the cinema, have consented to contribute their talent for the occasion, making an ensemble of artists that no other community—with the possible exception of New York—could muster. With a return of $85,000,000 to Southern California citrus growers, the highest yet received by the industry, and bright prospects for many other crops as the harvest season opens, the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in its September report, released yesterday, prophesies one of the best years known.

Two Hundred Million in 8 Months

In the United States, the construction industry is second only to agriculture, and when any section such as Southern California, spends in eight months more than $200,000,000 for building, it is high time for the remainder of the nation to sit up and take notice of what is going on.

The tremendous rate at which Los Angeles and southern California is building, compared to the remainder of the state and the relation of Los Angeles in its construction activities to the leading cities of the nation, is revealed by a study report furnished by S. W. Straus & Co. Building permits in California for the first eight months of the year amounted to $205,564,673, and in Los Angeles city $104,955,610. Ranking fifth in the nation in the order named: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit and Los Angeles.

Paul Shoup, Executive Vice President of the Southern Pacific Company says:

That the real problem that confronts us in the maintenance of an adequate revenue for our railroad transportation system, not necessarily as a matter of justice to the owners, which ought to be considered, but as a matter of vital necessity to the people of this country, in order that this transportation system may be maintained.

That to maintain the transportation system and standard of service required by the best interests of industry and commerce, the steam railway transportation system of this country ought to spend a billion dollars a year on equipment, new facilities and improvements.

That new facilities and improvements cannot be provided if revenues in the prices of commodities are inadequate.

That freight rates are relatively small items in the retail prices of staple articles of consumption and in no sense do they control these prices.

That the price of oranges per box in New York last year varied within one week more than the entire railroad revenue which must be maintained and should be increased to the end that new money be put each year into the transportation business so vitally essential to the public.

SYNOPSIS

Young Bob Wilson and his two tramp companions climb up the framework of the trestle of Granite Gorge to escape a landslide. Almost immediately they are startled to hear the whistle of the approaching Limited. To prevent disaster, Bob struggles desperately to push a boulder from the track. Nelson, one of his companions, wants to let the train be wrecked—and rob it. With his steel spike he deals Bob a vicious blow and the latter falls to his knees, dazed.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Memories of gridiron battles, when the greater the knocks and the odds the fiercer and hotter can his blood, flashed now into Bob's mind and goaded him to his feet. To his dizzy brain the track ties magically became ten yard marks, the granite sides of the railroad cut through the Gorge became a college stadium, and the wind became the roaring of forty thousand game-mad fans in mighty unison, "Hold 'em Princeton!"

Running low and calling numbers to himself as he ran Bob plunged recklessly toward the headlight which bore down upon him out of the night like a grotesque and flaming football. He fought madly to peel off the clinging folds of his wet coat, while the wind howled at him in an uncanny confusion of picas: "Block that kick!—Stop that train!—Block that kick!—Stop that train!"

His head cleared as he ran, so that presently he knew enough to come to a pause and stand, drawn to his full height there on the gridiron of wooden ties and steel rails, wav-

Bob plunged recklessly toward the headlight which bore down upon him.

His coat with wide sweeps defiantly up into the burning eye of the Cyclopean locomotive. The glaring light blinded him so that his whole visual world was a waste of whitehot embers. It was as though he had opened the door of Hell and looked in. His ears, made the keenest by their greater responsibility, brought to him above the storm a sound of screeching brakes that was at once a relief and a warning—he jumped, and a blistering cylinder head grazed him as the train blushed by like a hot broom.

In his next conscious moment Bob discovered that he was lying on his back by the stony trackside, his head pillow'd on the ample hand of a trainman, while the rain—which had been chilling—now tapped a refreshing saccato on his face. The great sleek length of the greyhound Limited was at a standstill. Pale light filtering down from Pullman windows revealed the question in Bob's eyes.

"O, K., ho, but no more'n a foot to spare," said the trainman gratefully; then with concern, "but say, you, 'bo—are you?"

Bob anticipated the question by getting quickly to his feet, aided by the strong arms of the trainman, and saying shakily,

"Oh, I'm all right. Just a little winded, and a mite bruised perhaps."

A bit unsteadily Bob walked with the engineer toward the excited group of trainmen, mail clerks and passengers who were milling warily around the boulder on the gusty, slippery trestle as they peered into the shrieking blackness of the Gorge and speculated upon the horribleness of the fate they had been saved.

The powerful headlight of the engine reached across the whole length of the trestle, which glistened in the rain-diffused glare like a foiled snake. The light, draining down through the interstices of the trestle, touched with a distant and guarded radiance the soapsudsy rapids swirling through the Gorge, and gave the awed spectators on the high tracks a Dantean glimpse into an Inferno.

Bob, coming diffidently no nearer than the fringe of the crowd, saw with amused tolerance that Potts was sharing the limelight with the boulder. Leaning importantly against the big stone, Potts was sweeping his brimless slouch hat up and down and around and about in grandiloquent gestures as he dramatically explained to the admiring rescues how he had flagged the train. But Bob's amusement gave way to resentment as he saw Spike walk boldly into the spotlight from nowhere and divide attention with Potts, to the latter's disappointment.

Bob throbbed with indignation against this sinster bum, who could now without compunction brazenly bid for the gratitude of people whom he had planned to rob—and murder. That was it—nothing short of murder! Involuntarily, Bob took a step forward, and a hot accusation rose to his lips. An appreciation of futility checked his steps and his cry. After all, what did it matter? To implicate Spike would be an involved and complicated matter requiring the expenditure of many words. How could he prove anything against Spike? One bum would be as good as another!

And, duly off a backrush of all his indifference, he asked himself "What's the use?"

He shrank even farther back into the shadows now, wishing that the train would proceed and leave him alone with his hobo pals—wishing, even, that Potts and Spike would ride away on the Limited and leave him entirely alone. His head ached from his falls. He was worn out and cold. He wanted now only to seek out a sheltered hole in the lee of some big rock and huddle and burrow down, like a homeless dog, for a sleep. He turned, and started to shamble away, forlorn and friendless, into the darkness.

To the center of the crowd around Potts and Spike the stalwart engineers of the Limited had pushed meanwhile. He listened for a moment to their claims, while anger and disgust overspread his greasy face. Then he interrupted scorchingly.

"Say, where the hell do you two guys get this stuff? I saw who saved us. It was the young bum!"

Potts coughed and slunk back a little while the engineer elaborated to the white faces encircling him:

"For me it was like having a front seat at the movies. The Old Girl's eye lit up the whole thing like a show. Just as I came around the curve I seen the young bum running toward us like a madman, waving his coat. If he hadn't come as far as he did, nothing could have saved us from going over. He stood there in the middle of the tracks as confident as a traffic cop. You know, a driver's instinct gets used to seeing everything at once. Away back of him I spotted the boulder on the trestle and knew why the young fellow was flagging me. I set the brakes and closed my eyes 'cause I didn't want to see him chewed down, for he made no move to get out of the way, but just stood there hunched over a little like I seen kids from State College gettin' ready to tackle the guy with the ball. For a minute I got a wild notion he was goin' to try and tackle the Limited. Funny how many queer notions can steam through your head when your brain is runnin' off the track!"

"My young colleagues performed a heroic service," interrupted Potts, "but I—I, sir, endeavored with might and main to dislodge this great stone while Bob ran to flag you. Recollect, sir, was I not with you in your mental picture of the climactic moment of this perilous event?"

The engineer appraised Potts good-naturedly, then admitted "Yes, Fatty, I remember that I couldn't decide which would be the most dangerous to hit—the boulder or you!"

The engineer's glance fell sternly on Spike. "But this bum was nowhere in sight!"

Spike returned the engineer's look, eye for eye, unabashed and insolent. However, an interruption came when a tall, slim young mail clerk who, disheveled and breathless, had elbowed his way into the forefront of the dripping crowd in time to hear the engineer's description of the flagging, asked:

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service

You should know that malarial fever can be controlled and prevented; that there are several methods of prevention that may be used against malaria.

First: by getting rid of anopheline mosquitoes, which cause malaria.

Second: by not letting these mosquitoes get to well people to bite them.

Third: by so treating men having malarial parasites in their blood that they will not infect the mosquito.

Fourth: by protecting healthy people that even if they are bitten by infected mosquitoes they will not develop malarial fever.

Anopheline or malarial mosquitoes may be destroyed by destroying their shelters and breeding places. They live mainly out of doors, and as they cannot bear the hot sun they shelter themselves in the brush and high weeds all day and come out at dusk to feed. All brush and high weeds near the house should be cut down. The brush about their breeding places should also be cut down. The less brush left to shelter mosquitoes the better, for if they are exposed to the hot sun many of them die.

The breeding places of malarial mosquitoes may be destroyed in two ways.

First, by draining or filling up the pools and marshes in which they breed; second, by oiling such pools as cannot be drained or filled. Oiling the pools prevents breeding because it kills the larvae. Try this on an old water barrel full of "wiggle tails" and see what happens.

Oiling should be done once in twelve or fourteen days. Use enough oil or kerosene, to form a layer all over the surface so that you can see it.

If there is much grass in the pool the oil will form a layer all over it. If the pool is large the wind will often blow the oil over to one side so that the surface on the other side is not covered.

On large pools and grassy pools oil cannot be depended upon.

New York—See-sawing up and down Broadway I saw Wyn Richmon, a new Broadway prima donna who bears a striking resemblance to the late Gaby Deslys. Saw Edith Talierro, the comedienne. Saw Henry Hull, whose age is a matter of mystery to me, he still looking like a boy in his teens, albeit he has looked that way for many years. Saw Billy B. Van, whose hobby is making soap, and he tells me that he will soon concoct a soap that will cure mange, fleas, baldness and gout. Saw Jeanette Hackett, who designs sets and dances and produces sketches in which she appears. A busy young lady, Saw John Stiel, the tenor songster. Saw Paul Whiteman, and I really believe he's a pound or two lighter. Saw Edna May Oliver, who is a very pretty lady. Saw a boss of a sightseeing bus paying off women capers who sit in busses to encourage others who would not board an empty bus. Their pay was in one dollar bills and each stopped to see if they had a lucky number for which New York papers pay prizes. Saw Lee Riddell, a former Folies Girl who has gone into the movies, and she looks so much like Corinne Griffith that everyone at the studio is confused. Saw Waite Hoyt, the ball flinger, and he is handsome enough to be an actor and it always seemed to be that on the ball field he sowed the temperament of one. Yet he has taken up mortuary studies to become an undertaker. Which career deals with a more definite business than that of the drama.

Some day science may learn just what effect changes in seasons and consequent changes in blood may have on human behavior and thus be enabled to make us a better race. The genius displayed by the crooked gentry is amazing. The other day the police report tells of two bandits which crowded a paymaster's machine to the curb and leaped it from their own car while both machines were traveling 40 miles an hour. They seized the pay toll and drove on in their victim's car until they caught up with their own. Leaping into their own car they escaped.

Tammany Young bears the reputation of never paying admission to any public event and he seldom misses a first night in the theatre. The other night he heard of a performance which had not been advertised and fled himself to the theater forthwith. He was stopped at the door and informed that the performance was for the benefit of an old character actor who had been ordered to Saranac Lake by his physician. Everyone was expected to pay a dollar admission and no Annie Oakleys were to be issued. Tammany pulled a greasy, creased five-dollar bill from his pocket and refused the change. It is said to be the first time he ever paid admission to anything.

JAMES W. DEAN.

New York—Your New Yorkers have grown so accustomed to the carryings on of hold-up men and burglars that he does not read the daily accounts of them in the papers unless they include the interesting detail of a murder or two.

Hardly a day passes but what the police capture a yegg they have been seeking for months. Thus it would be more robberies in proportion to population in New York than in other cities, but certainly there are far more in number. And I am not thinking now of cover charges.

Why does crime increase with the coming of autumn? I do not know whether my observation is correct, but on the surface there seems to be more robberies, murders, assaults and other major crimes taking place around here at present than has been the case in months. Within the past week the tong war has been renewed in Chinatown. Also the gun gangs are killing each other off after a truce that lasted almost a year.

two plays so far have been able to keep their tickets out of the half-price list.

How to know a good furnace

GREEN COLONIAL FURNACE

THE safe method by which you may select a GOOD furnace and truly KNOW it will give you unlimited satisfaction and lasting comfort, is to carefully compare various furnaces, unit by unit.

Such comparison will show that the furnace industry's leading features are assembled in the COLONIAL. There is the Dome Heat Intensifier, with its doubled heating area. The Air Blast Firebowl, with air vents, gets extra heat units from the fuel. The special Green Radiator holds back and uses the heat that usually escapes. The Double Feed Doors make firing easy. The Improved Grate saves fuel and prevents dust while shaking.

See these features. We'll gladly demonstrate.

BRITAIN'S TELEPHONES

The London Daily Telegraph, in a recent editorial, admits the English are "far behind" the Americans "in the application of the telephone to daily life" and adds:

"The advantages of such application it would be superfluous to argue. The simplification and acceleration of business processes are sufficiently well known. The use of the telephone in housewifery and in social intercourse is familiar to all those who can afford it."

Great Britain, however, the editorial points out "decided for nationalization" of the telephone system years ago, and now "the service offered is not sufficiently good to tempt those who can manage their affairs without it."
